GRAYLING, MICHIGAN, OCTOBER 30, 1924

OSCAR P. SCHUMANN, Editor and Proprietor

NUMBER 43

PARAGRAPHS CONCERNING MICHIGAN

(By Ed. A. Nowack.)

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 30.—Federal prohibition forces in Michigan number 30 men. With that force James Davis, Director, is charged with the duty of prohibition law enforcement in 83 counties, along 100 miles of water frontage on territory bordering a potential "wet" district and in cities where liquor law enforcement is not too seriously regarded. Four of the 30 men under Davis are inspectors, leaving him as a matter of fact, but 26 men for enforcement work. However, Davis reports that the degree of cooperation between city, county and state officers is good.

Detroit has approximately 105 hotel most of them, however, being well off the beaten path of every day travel. Until this year Detroit ranked 3rd in the United States as a convention city. This year she has slipped into 12th place, with Toronto, Canada, supplanting Detroit. Toronto and Montreal both are making extraordinary bids for conventions for the next year and it is doubtful if Detroit will be able to come back to its former position for some years. Detroit's loss of prestige is entirely due to the prevailing high prices charged by the hotels, one hotel man said. His explanation of the city's loss was summed up like this: "Detroit hotel men might have found it a good policy to have kept its great volume of convention business satisfied than to now spend large sums in trying to get it back."

The Stephenson Super-Highway, a proposed thoroughfare from the Detroit river to Rochester, Mich., 204 feet wide was dedicated the other day. There were four auto accidents along with the opening ceremonies. Other features of the new highway are: The Ford Motor Co., will aid in a subway tunnel under the 21 railroad tracks at the rear of the Highland Park plant over which a car passes every minute of the day, this tunnel to be 2,000 feet long and 110 feet wide. Hastings street, Detroit's most wicked street, is to be condemned and widened, thereby cleaning out a district that has pestered city, state, county and federal officers for years.

Congressman John McDuffie of Alabama was an interested spectator at last week's session of the state administrative board. He will draft a report on the business-like way of doing business that Michigan has and present it to his governor. In a long conference with Major Eaton and Fred Perry, respectively the secretaries to the government and the board, McDuffie went deep into the administrative board idea. Michigan is the only state in the union to have such an administrative measure. New York, Oklahoma, West Virginia, South Carolina, Iowa, Kentucky and Illinois have asked Michigan for copies of the law creating the administrative board and for information as to how it functions.

TOP O' MICHIGAN POTATO SHOW NEXT WEEK.

Everything is in readiness for the Top O' Michigan Potato show which will be held at Gaylord on November 5th, 6th and 7th. The Secretary reports that over 100 entries have been made and that many more will follow, which indicates that the competition for the $800.00 in cash prizes will be indeed stern and close. Leading potato producers predict that the quality will be much better than last year and that the man who is crowned "King of the Spud" will have to show a mighty fine article. The interest on the part of the growers in Otsego and adjacent counties is so keen that almost a 100% attendance is expected.

The other features of the show may prove to be even more attractive than the high-class potatoes," according to Mr. F. J. Shipp, president of the show. "The program is one of the strongest ever presented to a group of Michigan potato growers. All the way from Mr. Jason Woodman, Michigan's veteran potato grower, to Dr. Wm. Stuart, U. S. Dept. of agriculture, the program is filled with men who know the subject and can present it in an attractive manner. Both Wednesday and Thursday afternoon programs will be worth a man's time to attend. Moreover, the State Dept. of agriculture will again be on hand with an exhibit as good as the one of last year, which attracted so much attention. The Agricultural college is also sending an exhibit which should prove very interesting. Add to these the machinery exhibit and the judging contests, and the list of attractions is indeed imposing. Twenty dollars in cash is offered in cash prizes to the growers placing ten entries of potatoes most nearly correct. We can guarantee a profitable and pleasant time to all who attend."

The first city planning commission in Michigan sprung into being 119 years ago when a French engineer tried to tell the wise boys in Detroit they should insist on plating streets 120 feet wide instead of the 30, 40, 50, and 60 feet as was done.

NICHOLAS DOWEN, FORMER NORTHERN MICHIGAN LUMBERMAN DIES IN SEATTLE.

Nicholas Dowen, while temporarily at the home of his son James Dowen, died at Seattle, Washington, September 25th, 1924, aged 67 years. He leaves surviving, Ella A. Dowen, his wife; and sons and daughters, James, John, Thomas, Frank, and Nicholas Jr., Henry, Elleen Dowen and Mrs. Merle Richayer; all residing near Burlington, Washington.

For many years Mr. Dowen was continuously in charge of camps and lumbering operations along the Manistee River, and while connected with the Dempsey Lumber company of Manistee, Michigan, in 1904 came to the State of Washington, where for several years, he successfully conducted logging operations for that company. After severing his connections with that company he purchased a large dairy farm near Burlington, Washington, which since has been the place of residence of himself and his family.

He was for several years Supervisor of Glade township, Kalkaska county, and for many years before and at the time of his death was affiliated with the Masonic Lodge at Grayling, Michigan. He was well and favorably known as an honorable, honest, trustworthy man; a leader among his fellows, and was justly held in high esteem by everyone who knew him; all of whom will sincerely regret to learn of his death. During his last sickness, besides his wife and children, there were present to comfort him his sisters, Mrs. Ann Campbell of Fife Lake, Michigan, and Mrs. Nina McCoy, and his brother Thomas Dowen of Chinook, Montana. Funeral services were held and interment occurred at Sedrowooley, Washington, on September 29th, 1924.

State employees who go out of the state to attend conventions without permission of the state administrative board do so at their expense, it has been ruled. Four bills for that many employees totalling $200 each, were sent before the board for approval and the governor exploded.

Democrat Candidate for the Office of
COUNTY TREASURER
Election Nov. 4th.

Your support respectfully Solicited.

PETER F. JORGENSEN

ANNOUNCEMENT TO THE VOTERS AND TAXPAYERS OF CRAWFORD COUNTY

As Election time is again at hand and you are called on to make your selection of Sheriff, I wish to take this opportunity to inform you that I am a candidate for sheriff, to succeed myself.

For the past two years I have served you as sheriff to the best of my ability and that there has never been a call upon the sheriff that has not been taken care of promptly and in the very best manner. I have always had the interests of the taxpayers in mind in running the office as cheaply as possible and records now in the county clerk's office will show that the Sheriff's office has never been run on as an economical basis as in the past two years.

If Elected I promise that the Office will be handled in the same efficient manner.

My campaign is not handled by any social faction or combination to gain control of my office.

I solicit your support on an unbiased platform.

I would like to call on each voter personally but due to the fact that Circuit Court is in session and other duties of the office are taking all of my time I am soliciting your support thru these columns.

CAST YOUR VOTE FOR PETER F. JORGENSEN FOR SHERIFF.

ABOUT FRENCH PASTRY

To the average cook French pastry is a sealed book, as the most of such dainties are prepared from puff paste, which is a morning's work to prepare; however, most attractive pastry trills may be made at home with just the ordinary rich pastry with which the apple pie is made.

Vanities.—Cut pastry into squares (three-inch), wet the middle and fold each corner over a blanched almond. In the center place a small star of pastry; bake in a hot oven. When cool pipe a bit of whipped cream on each corner and top with a cube of bright jelly.

Pastry Roses.—These may be used filled with any desired sweet, or as decoration for various tarts or pastries. Cut thinly rolled pastry into four-inch squares, fold in halves, then fold again, making a two-inch square; bring the points together and pinch firmly; turn over and gash nearly through in opposite directions. Roll the points back, wet the back and place where wished. Sprinkle with powdered sugar before serving.

Peach Tart.—Bake shallow scalloped oval cases of pastry; spread a thin layer of lemon jelly over the bottom of each and fill with thin overlapping slices of drained preserved peaches. Decorate with cream or frosting around the edges, sprinkle with coconut and minced pistachio nuts.

Love Knots.—Cut three-fourths-inch wide strips of thinly rolled-out pastry, and from them fashion how knots four inches long. Brush with egg, sprinkle with finely chopped nuts and bake. When cooled place a cherry or preserved berry in each end of the bow and a whiff of whipped cream in the center.

Napoleons.—Cut oblongs of similar size from rolled-out pastry, bake in a good oven and put together in layers of four with lemon honey or cream filling between. Cover the tops with coffee or mocha frosting, groove in a pattern with the end of a spoon and sprinkle with a narrow row of minced pistachio nuts at each end. Pipe on a little whipped cream just before serving.

A politician thinks of the next election, a statesman of the next generation.—James Freeman Clark.

CHOICE GOOD THINGS

For a nice occasion nothing could be more appealing to the appetite than—

Santa Dalia Chicken Salad.—Scald round, perfect tomatoes, skin and hollow them deeply. Prepare chicken salad as usual, adding chopped button mushrooms, chopped green pepper and chopped pimento, to color well. Moisten with mayonnaise dressing. Fill the tomatoes which have been rubbed well on the inside with salad dressing. Place on lettuce leaves and garnish with a circle of hulled, stuffed olives; surround these with a second circle of thinly sliced cucumber pickle and dot here and there with flecks of chopped pickled beet.

Molasses Dumplings.—Take pieces of dough from the bread bowl, adding a little extra shortening to each piece as it is made into balls, and place to rise in a deep dripping pan. Meanwhile cook together for a few moments a cupful of water, a tablespoonful of butter, a cupful of molasses and a tablespoonful of sugar. When the dumplings are light, pour this sauce over them and bake in a moderate oven. Serve with the sauce about each dumpling for dessert.

Providence Punch.—Into the bottom of a tall crystal tumbler drop two tablespoonfuls of orange juice, over this any combination of fruit and salad, using two tablespoonfuls; it may be of canned peaches, pears and pineapple in equal proportions, marinating them in sugar sirup for an hour; then two tablespoonfuls of crushed ice, next a layer of fresh strawberries, or raspberries sugared slightly, or maraschino cherries, cut into pieces, then squeeze lemon juice over and fill the glass with charged water, care-being taken not to disturb the rainbow effect.

Philadelphia Pepper Pot.—Wash a small knuckle of veal, slice one large onion and cover both with three quarts of cold water and place on the back of the range and let slowly come to the boiling point. Simmer for several hours; then strain and set away to cool. Skim free from fat, add two potatoes cut into dice, a pound of cooked tripe, cut into small pieces, half a bay leaf, a few sprays of parsley chopped fine, and the meat from the veal joint cut into small pieces and freed from gristle. Boil slowly, just long enough to cook the potatoes, then season to taste with salt, pepper, and thicken with a heaping tablespoonful each of flour and butter rubbed to a paste. Add dumplings or noodles to the soup and serve.

NEW STYLES IN MILLINERY; VARYING THE FORMAL DRESS

STYLES in millinery are well established and greatly varied, but the advancing season finds emphasis placed on certain points that have developed great popularity. The mode in dressy headwear sponsors both large and small hats, but incoming winter furs, and coats with huge fur collars, have spurred up the demand for the smaller shapes, there is no doubt that they will continue to dominate the styles.

Whether headwear be large or small it bears the gleam or glint of gold and silver. Metallic brocades in combination with velvet or satin or made up into small turbans are conspicuous and beautiful examples of gorgeous mid-winter millinery. Besides there are small hats of velvet or satin encrusted with gold braiding or embroidery. Other rich hats of velvet have only a touch of metal appearing in narrow collars of gold or silver ribbon or metallic braid or cord about the crown.

Velvet and metallic fabrics always invite fur as a trimming—it provides an additional note of richness. Spotted gazelle and ermine dyed in pastel colors, a tawny fur called pahl and fringe of leopard skin are among the fur novelties.

The group of dress hats pictured include two which may be classed as large—one medium and two small ent in the evening mode. Each one of these styles has many interpretations. Paris finds ways and means for endless variety in the straight silhouette for those who like it best. Here are two models, one of a dress having an apron tunic and the other an over-blouse of crepe de chine adorned with beading, to be worn with a separate skirt. In the dress a tunic of printed silk is posed over a straight under-dress of crepe satin. Velvet ribbon is used to border the deep collar and hem line of the underdress and for a narrow girle. A splendid tassel suspended by rings from the girle, is the most important style point of this design. There are many color combinations available for this model.

Among colors, rose, green, blue, pink or wallflower are suggested for the crepe de chine overblouse, with crystal beads in its decoration. It has a new collar that merits attention and a tassel of beads that holds the center of the stage, among things that contribute to the success of this model. The blouse fits snugly about the hips, where three crystal buttons are posed at each side.

They call them Beau Brummel hats, those square high-crowned affairs that are so much in evidence at present. They come in felt, velvet and hatters' plush, and are often of black.

Shaded Felt for Hats

A small hat of green felt, simple in line, owes its originality to the fact that the felt is shaded from delicate green to quite a deep shade at the brim.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

by Mary Graham Bonner

MOTHER DEER MOUSE

"When night comes," said Mother Deer Mouse, "I don't tell my children to go to bed."

"I don't say a word about sleeping or having pleasant dreams, or any of those things!"

"Instead, I tell them it is time to get up, for we like to sleep during the daytime and to travel and see the sights and do our marketing at night."

"My children are so beautiful. They do look like little deer children—and they are deer children, too."

"Their coats will grow lovelier all the time—such beautiful coats of light tan color—and their tails will be such a handsome shade of gray and they will have touches of white for decoration and trimming."

"Their eyes are so bright and their ears so pretty—they do have some of the looks of the deer family."

"They hang on to me when they are little, and I take them about with me this way. If one of them falls off I leave the others in a safe place and go back for the one that has fallen."

"Then I carry him to safety in my mouth."

"My children are learning the good climbing lessons all deer mice should know."

"They are bright at their lessons. They like the tree nest and they sometimes sing a little—such pretty little songs."

"They are fond of nuts, and they know that no market baskets are so good as their own cheek pouches for carrying home the goodies."

"In the springtime my baby darlings were without fur. But that was all right. It was warm then and I kept them warm, too. But now they have lovely coats."

"They were such helpless, feeble little darlings and they couldn't see a thing."

"But Mother Deer Mouse looked after them. She was afraid of nothing."

"They'll Hang Onto Me."

ing where the safety of her babies was concerned.

"They have such nice little teeth, and they can eat grain and corn as well as nuts."

"I am speaking, of course, of my youngest children. They have still younger sisters and brothers born later in the summer. It makes it so nice for the older ones to have younger sisters and brothers and for the younger ones to have older sisters and brothers who help to teach them Deer Mice ways."

"Some animals go to sleep in the winter time, and many of them now are thinking of a long, winter's sleep."

"But not the members of the Deer Mice family. We're too wide awake for that."

"We even travel about over the snow, and though it may get very cold, still, we think it makes us strong."

"We are nervous little creatures, but still we don't spoil ourselves by sleeping in warmth and safety all the winter."

"We like adventures too much for that."

"But we must be gathering together plenty of nuts for the winter time now. Before long food will be scarce and we must be ready for that time."

So Mother Deer Mouse, who had been talking to herself while the children slept, awakened them and said: "Come, my darlings, we must get food for the winter. We must begin now."

"Wake up, my darlings! Open your sleepy eyes!"

And the little deer mice opened their sleepy eyes and went with Mother Deer Mouse to hunt for food. The cool air made them feel like burrying and they worked hard and fast.

They tried to keep safely out of the way of Mr. Owl, who had long been a family enemy, and there was no sign that he was thinking of ever becoming friendly.

Oh, such a scampering and such a rushing as there was in Deer Mice circle.

Such a preparation for the cold, long days and nights of winter.

But they were all very gay and very happy, for they were a big, happy family, and they all loved each other.

And why not? Were they not as pretty and appealing a little family of cunning deer mice as ever you'd hope to see!

Seemingly Logical

At a small country school the scholars were having a lesson on animals. The teacher had asked a number of questions which were easily answered. At length, she said:

"Why does a dog hang out his tongue when running?"

A lad who had not answered before held up his hand.

"Yes, Tommy, why does it?" she inquired.

"To balance his tail," was the reply. —Dublin Telegraph.

Prodigal With Tips

The prodigality of the Indian chief, Elk Ferman, is the wonder of all Italy. The Indian chieftain, observes the Montreal Herald, is traveling right through that country and wherever he stops—he distributes most generally 100-lire notes (equal to $20) to passers-by and children. Imagine, then Naples, the land where urchins abound, and the Indian chieftain flinging these unheard-of tips in return for a bowl.

Naples will retain in its memory his visit, and the moment he landed was a red-letter day. Children vied with each other to perform the best somersaults. Now he has arrived in Florence, where he gave a stupendous dinner to many friends, after which he spoke very warmly of Signor Mussolini, whom he called "the great Italian chieftain."

Mending an Umbrella

Broken joints between the braces and ribs of an umbrella can be repaired with friction tape, says Popular Science Monthly. Simply put the end of the brace where it belongs and wind tightly with the tape in such a way that the action of the joint will not be interfered with. The umbrella then can be opened and closed without difficulty and the repair will be found to last surprisingly well.

Introducing Foreign Trees

In order to determine the suitability of foreign trees for introduction into this country, arboreta, in which groups of such "immigrant" species can be tried out, are being established by the United States forest service. At Wind River, 60 miles from Portland, Ore., an arboretum of this sort has now some 75 different alien species growing in small groups of clumps. These trees are carefully watched by members of the Pacific Northwest forest experiment station. Local records of climate and soil conditions are also maintained.

THOUSANDS of users have wondered at the quickness of the action of Resinol Ointment and Soap. The answer is that it is not a surface treatment, but one that reaches the depths of the pores and attacks the source of the disorder, starting the healing right.

The first touch relieves the itching, burning and soreness and a few days' persistent use rarely fails to clear away the trouble.

When the skin is once restored to its normal condition, the daily use of Resinol Soap is generally sufficient to keep it healthy. Ideal for the complexion—unsurpassed for the bath and shampoo. Ask your druggist what he knows about the Resinol products.

Unprecedented Drought

All records for drought were broken in western Washington, the area between the Cascade mountains and the Pacific ocean, in the weather year ending September 1. This region generally is associated with heavy rainfall, but in the last year only 22.79 inches of rain were measured by the weather bureau. Records dating from 1854 make the average annual moisture 40.70. The banner year for rain was 1897, when the fall was 52.70. Old-timers commonly assert that the rainfall is diminishing as the forests that once covered western Washington are being cut away.

JOSELYN'S WIFE

Copyright, by Kathleen Norris

HOME AGAIN

SYNOPSIS.—Ellen and Joe Lathrop, orphans, without means, make their home with their Aunt Elsie, at Port Washington, small New York town. Ellen is studying art, her expenses being paid by Mrs. Sewall Rose, girlhood friend of her mother. Mrs. Rose invites Ellen to a Thanksgiving house party, and the girl is delighted. On the way from the station to Mrs. Rose's Ellen rides with a remarkably attractive young woman, and a much older man. She takes them for father and daughter, but they are introduced as Mr. and Mrs. Joselyn. Ellen does not "fit in" with the younger members of the party, and is miserable. Leaving for her home next morning, Ellen meets Gibbs Joselyn, son of her father's guest. He has disappointed of his father's wedding and is not on speaking terms with the couple. Declining to stay at Mrs. Rose's, Gibbs drives Ellen to the station. They miss the train and Gibbs undertakes to drive the girl to Port Washington. Their auto is wrecked. Ellen is hurt, but it is not thought of as serious, and she and Gibbs part. He has been attracted by the girl, and she by him. Ellen's injury proves to be severe, and for months she is an invalid. Recovered, she is taking part in the town's Memorial day festivities when Gibbs Joselyn, on a vacation trip with a friend, George Lathrop, meets her again. The feeling of mutual attraction has strengthened since they parted. They leave Port Washington man and wife.

CHAPTER V

"Tommy, dear," the little mother in the big blue coat said presently, lifting the child from her lap, and setting him upon his own sturdy legs on the deck, "run and tell dad that mother wants to see him! Tell him we're almost—almost in!"

Her voice rose almost to song on the last phrase, and although the child was already out of hearing, her nearest neighbor, an elderly woman also comfortably stretched in a deck chair, heard her and smiled.

"You sound glad to be back, Mrs. Joselyn!" said she.

"I didn't know how glad I was going to be," admitted Ellen Joselyn, her happy eyes leaving the prospect of the dark waters of the harbor mouth, and the unmistakable approach of the solid blue shadows that mean land. "Mr. Joselyn and I went abroad the very day after our marriage, and that was six years ago last October. We've lived in France all this time. Tommy was born there, and when we decided to come back to America I felt a sort of terror, actually! It seemed much harder than the original uprooting, strangely enough! I never have been homesick, already for France! And yet, now that we're almost in, I'm beginning to be terribly thrilled!"

Ellen let her eyes rest on the tumbling water again, and the nearing land. America again! Thirty-four years ago, Central park again; after all, it was home. She had curiously, vaguely dreaded it, she had had her times of hoping never to return, and yet now she felt a sudden thrill and a rush of something like rapture in her heart.

She was an older Ellen, at twenty-nine, and an astonishingly developed Ellen. The six years had made a woman of intelligence and charm. Travel and study had done their share. Joy had had its part in the change, and sorrow, too. Wifehood had brought her generous nature only what was fine and good, motherhood had brought her the boy that was the core of her heart. And motherhood had brought sorrow as well, for little Tom had had a sister for a few happy months, three years ago, and the baby grave, in a strange cemetery, was never long out of Ellen's thoughts.

But that was the only shadow. Otherwise, it was all gain. The radiant girl that had sailed with Gibbs from this same harbor more than six years ago had not been an exacting wife. There was no background of appalling selfishness to make Ellen Joselyn a difficult woman to live with. Her joyous: "Oh, Gibbs, won't that be fun!" had charmed him, and perhaps a little touched him, a thousand times in those first days. Everything was delight to her, the ship, the new friends, the new gowns. Her eyes and heart were never tired of new impressions.

Paris was all she had ever dreamed for, her life, much more than her brightest dream. And before Tommy came, and afterward, and always, how wonderful life was for Ellen! Exploring the magic city, with her hand in Gibbs' arm, watching content and ambition mark new lines in his face, hearing him say, a dozen times a day, that she had given him back his life; her happy, grateful heart was only too full. He began to work at once, and for awhile she worked, too. But swiftly she saw that her earnest and clever beginning was as that of a promising child. There were ten thousand girls in Paris who could do what Ellen could do.

Gibbs was a genius, she never doubted it, and it was only a year or two after they came to Paris that his world began to see it, too. He went straight at his portrait work, and he lived only for that and for her. And Ellen, watching other women struggle and despair, in loneliness and poverty, wondered, with her old, sweet, childish surprise, why God had been so good to her.

And presently she had Tommy, and they were playing at housekeeping in the tiniest of little lost villages in Brittany. These were days of sunshine, while Gibbs, wonderful in knickerbockers and a paint-smeared snook, painted, and Yvonne walked bareheaded to market, and Ellen played under twisted old trees with Tommy. Tommy had no nurse but Ellen was thrifty, even in Paris, and Ellen had spent more than one evening on the arm of Gibbs' chair, working out the financial end of their problem. Their money must last until this time—or that time—they must think of the future.

When Tommy was two years old, and before the second child was born, Gibbs painted his wife. They were in Brittany again, and Ellen, with white sewing in the lap of a checked gown, and figure and face already caught in the first rising tide of motherhood, was set against a background of garbled old grapevines.

The picture was hung in the Salon des Independents, and Ellen, when her delicate little girl was a few weeks old, went to see it. There was a crowd about it; it was always a crowd about it. It was the discussed picture of the year, but she always looked at it with a little pang at her heart. She had been so happy in those sleepy July days in the grape-arbor; she had thought that the new baby would be like Tommy, strong and gay and hungry. And the tiny new thing, who had been named Rose for Gibbs' mother, was so frail. Even while she was looking at Gibbs' picture, his first success, Ellen's heart was in the little nursery on Mont Saint Etienne, hanging agonized above the little bed where Rose Joselyn lay quiet, apathetic, little asleep.

The picture, during the winter, caused a widening circle of comment and admiration, and presently Gibbs had his first commission, and was to paint a boy of ten, in the trim gray uniform of a military school, and receive two thousand francs for the picture.

So fame was coming, and fortune would come close on her heels. Ellen, sitting by the studio window in the winter afternoons, and looking out at the fluttering snow into which Yvonne had taken the dancing Tommy, mused upon the dream that had become the fact. She had Paris, Gibbs, and Tommy—she must more than she had asked! But the silent, apathetic little Rose was gone from the nursery now, never to lie against her mother's heart again.

Was that the cost of success—she wondered. Success was new, but ah, this constant hunger at her heart, this new, too. How gladly—how gladly she would let the one go, if she might lose the other!

Gibbs painted three more portraits the next winter, which made them feel rich; but he was working hard and enthusiastically in the atelier six mornings a week, and neither he nor Ellen were inclined to extravagance, so that there was no particular incentive to seek commissions.

And so the exquisite years went by, and Tommy was three and then four, and still the Joselyns lived in their own happiness, shut away from the world, and glad to forget it. Ellen's whole heart was wrapped about her husband, her girlish idealism had never been disturbed. True, she knew now that Gibbs was human, she knew now that he could be unreasonably, that he had moods in which she and Tommy and Yvonne must keep even a crumpled rosie from his path.

But he loved her, she amused him and pleased his pride, and her happy ways with him, that sometimes were those of a daughter and a pupil, sometimes wide-eyed admiration, sometimes all motherly, were dear to him. He did not have to ask her if she loved him; he was all her world.

Suddenly, in the seventh year, a new note came into their conversations. Without any premonition they began to say: "If we do go back to America," Ellen was as innocent as Gibbs of any prearranged planning to that effect. They simply felt the possibility in the air.

Presently Gibbs' mind had seized strongly upon the idea. He would go to New York, and find a studio, and see what the prospect was of painting portraits there. After Tommy's birth, at Ellen's request, he had written his father, enclosing a little photograph of the small, bald-headed lump of babyhood that was Thomas Gibbs, Third, and the grandfather had eagerly responded to the overture. A magnificent gold-lined cup had come from Tiffany's for the baby, and presents on all formal occasions.

Now Gibbs began to think he would like to show his father the stalwart Tommy, who spoke two languages at five, and played his little violin so nicely.

Then, abruptly, it was settled, and they began to wonder how they had managed to stay away so long. Ellen, during the last busy days, would stop sometimes in her packing to look out of the undraped studio window. They had been so happy here since the marvelous days when she and Gibbs had unpacked the boxes, and laid the rugs, and hung the pictures with their own hands. Was it time to run away from it all?

And then came the memory of Fifth avenue in spring sunshine, and the sound of one's own tongue spoken on all sides and the garden in Main street sweet with lilacs, and she would smile again.

She smiled now as the little boy and the tall man crossed the deck to her. Gibbs was young, at thirty-eight, despite the silver hair. He had been playing bridge, and was glad to get into the fresh air, after the hot smoking room.

"You packed everything!" he accused her.

"Because I wanted you to be free to see the very first of the city!" she answered eagerly. "Look, Tommy, that's Ellis Island, dear, where all the immigrants have to get off. And look, there's Liberty!"

"It is darned thrilling!" Gibbs said, smiling, as they leaned on the rail. The ocean was left behind them, they were well into the river now, and on both sides the land was coming down to meet them. Trees were still bare, but Easter was near.

"We've missed all the ugly, hard part," Ellen exclaimed, "and we'll get all the glory of the spring!"

"I wrote the old man we'd go to the Brevoort," Gibbs said. "I bet we'll find a message there. They'll ask us down to the new house."

Ellen smiled. Her father-in-law and his wife had recently taken possession of a new home at Wheatley Hills, a fashionable colony only a few miles from Port Washington. It would be rather fun to visit there, as Gibbs' wife, with little Thomas, Third. She well remembered the handsome woman who had been so bafflingly superior in her manner toward Mrs. Rose; her own—what was it?—step-mother-in-law now, so curiously had events come about.

"Gibbs!" she said suddenly. "Look—there by that little boy on the pier who's waving the flag! Isn't that your father—of course it is! And your step-mother, too—and there's Joe—there's Joe, the old darling—that's Uncle Joe, Tommy—Oh, Joe—Joe—Joe!"

"That is dad," Gibbs said, deeply pleased and touched. "And there's old George—I call this decent! We've been away so long, Ellen, that I'd forgotten how nice it is to have folks! I suppose the dashing lady in the black hat is my mamma? Wave your hand, kid, that's your family! And try to remember the English for things, or they'll not like you!"

"It is Darned Thrilling!" Gibbs said, smiling, as they leaned on the Rail.

Five minutes later they were all together in a jumble of landing. Ellen was kissed on her suddenly wet cheeks by her father-in-law, and by George Lathrop, who had been best man at their wedding, and by the sweet and rather silent Joe. Joe was taller than ever, he would never be well-dressed or well-groomed, but Ellen clung to the big, boyish arm, and laughed into his handsome, kindly face as if she could never feel and see and hear enough of him. He had improved so, and he looked so—well, so grown-up! After all, one's little brother was one's little brother, even if he was twenty-five! She found her father-in-law aged, he was somehow shrunken, and his face had grown leaner in its aspect. Lillian was so changed as to be hardly recognizable.

She was dressed with great severity, but everything she wore was fine and rich. Her skin was like a rose leaf, her dark eyes were rimmed with faint violet shadows—eyes made for sorrow, but shining with pleasure and hospitality now. Ellen thought she had never seen whiter teeth, or a more beautiful scarlet mouth to enhance their whiteness.

She had been beautiful seven years ago, she was more than that now. She radiated charm and personality, there was a hint of sadness in her face when it was in repose, there were a hundred provocative attractions in her thoughtful smile. She was ready with a French phrase, a German phrase, she touched lightly upon the Italian political situation, she had the name of a Russian novelist readily upon her tongue.

Ellen thoroughly liked George Lathrop, who was Gibbs' senior by only six or seven years, and his best friend. George was a lawyer, and a man of importance, but he was somewhat insignificant in appearance, and his manner still betrayed the country boy who has fought his way to the top.

"You must help me get some new gowns," Ellen said, realizing for the first time in seven years that gowns really were important. "Of course at home—in Paris, I mean, I've worn only studio things."

"But, my dear, you should have gotten loads of things in Paris!" Lillian said. "You'll think they're prizes here!"

"Well, I did get an evening gown, and an afternoon dress," Ellen said. "Gibbs and I tried to pick out something smart. But really it is hard, and one can't tell which is going to be adopted, and so many women dress just to fit their own types, now, regardless of style!"

"Here we are!" Joe, who could not move his delighted eyes from his sister, said suddenly. They all got out at the great hotel where Ellen learned they were to stay for a day or two, instead of the Hotel Brevoort, before going down to the country house, to which Lillian had given an Italian name, "Villino dell'Orto."

Joselyn, Senior, it appeared, kept a suite at the Biltmore throughout the entire year. He and his wife could come and go at their own pleasure, change in their own familiar rooms from street attire to evening dress, keep an appointment there with manicurist or masseuse, or entertain their friends with a cozy meal served before their own fire. Today he had engaged the adjoining suite for his son's family.

"Isn't this corking?" Gibbs exclaimed, when the younger Joselyns were alone.

"Oh, Gibbs! It's such fun! And aren't they dears to do it all—and aren't you glad now that I made you write when Tom was born?" Ellen had taken off the big blue coat, and the jacket of her suit, and appeared in a loose little blouse of dark-blue velvet with a deep collar of old lace. She opened the door into the drawing room of the other suite, and there, to the child's delight, was the lunch table, with two waiters hovering about it, and a shining display of covered dishes and steaming pots. They gathered about it immediately. Ellen between Joe and George Lathrop, Tommy chattering to his enraptured grandfather, Gibbs and Lillian making each other's acquaintance after the long years.

Afterward, Ellen walked to the lift with her brother, and stood there talking to him as if she would never be done.

"You seem to like Mr. Lathrop, Joe?"

"He's a king!" Joe said, with a quick meeting of eyes.

"And the boy, is he nice, Joe?"

"George—he's all right. He's in college now. Harvard."

"And how's Harriet? She must be—"

"She's nineteen."

"Is she all over the sickness now?" Ellen had remembered suddenly that the tomboy Harriet had had a frightful illness about a year ago—something that their vague reports had given her to understand was like an infantile paralysis.

"Sure. She limps some—she's getting well." Joe fell silent, straightening the corner of her lace collar carefully. Something in his gravity troubled her vaguely, and she turned thoughtfully back to her room, wondering. At the doorway she met George Lathrop, also departing.

"My little brother has grown up!" Ellen said, with a rueful smile.

He answered her with another smile.

Enter the handsome step-mother and all sorts of new factors into the life of the Gibbses. New happiness or trouble?

Ocean Temperature

The surface water of the ocean varies in temperature with the latitude. The hottest water, about 80 degrees, is at the equator, and the coldest at the poles. At a depth of 700 feet, however, the ocean, even in the tropics, is extremely cold. This icy water has drifted down from the poles, spreading its chilling effect over the entire sea. In the lowest depths the temperature is very close to the freezing point. There is no danger that the ocean will ever freeze, because the water is in perpetual motion through waves, tides and currents, and also because the warm water at the equator keeps the general temperature from dropping too low.

Good Detective Work on Part of Chemist

An epidemic of abusive anonymous letters broke out in a small suburban town near Albany, recently. The town's chief of police finding he was making no progress in his investigations, enlisted the aid of consulting a chemist interested in curious problems of crime susceptible to scientific detection.

Scrutiny of a hundred or more of the letters convinced the scientist—the unknown writer was a middle-aged woman, says Capper's Weekly. All kinds of writing paper were used, but always a sharp-pointed steel pen and the same kind of ink.

Dust in the ink indicated an open ink-well was used by the writer. At this point the chemist made up a lot of pellets, using a different chemical for each, but every chemical capable of identification if mixed with ink. Then, in the guise of an inspector of electric wiring, the chemist gained access to the houses of all suspects. Whenever he found an open ink-well he dropped a pellet in it.

The next anonymous letter led him to the woman responsible for it. And in a few days she was trapped in the act of sending off another one. That ended the case in a regular Sherlock Holmes style.

Odd Playing Cards

A pack of Hinduist cards in the possession of the Royal Asiatic society of England is supposed to be one thousand years old. It consists of eight suits of various colors. The kings are mounted on elephants, the viziers, or those second in rank, are upon horses, tigers and bulls. Some of the cards have such curious marks as a pile of apples in a shallow cup and an object similar to a parasol without a handle, but with two broken ribs sticking through the top.

Entered as second class matter at the Postoffice, Grayling, Mich., under the act of Congress of March, 3, 1919.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1924.

LET'S HAVE a big vote. Every man and woman entitled to vote should do so. Go to the polls next Tuesday and don't leave until you have voted. The issues involved in the election have been pretty well discussed and intelligent voters should have their minds made up about who to vote for.

Republicans who have Republican principles at heart can with perfectly clear conscience vote for Dean Cooley Democratic candidate for United States senator. The Republican candidate James Couzens is no more a Republican than LaFollette so what is the use of a Republican voting for him. Wouldn't it be safer to vote for Mortimer E. Cooley, a Democrat, when we know exactly where he stands? Dean Cooley has been at the head of the engineering department of the University of Michigan for nearly 40 years, and is still on the job. And wouldn't it be well to have an engineer of his high type in the United States senate, especially when such important engineering problems as Muscle Shoals and the Deep Sea waterway and other big engineering jobs confront the nation. Why not have at least one person in the Senate who is not a lawyer or Multi-millionaire. The country will be better off with a man like Dean Cooley in the U. S. senate.

THE REASONS for voting "No" on all the amendments becomes more and more apparent as time goes on. The Parochial School amendment; the State Income Tax amendment and the State Re-Appportionment amendment all deserve to be defeated. These amendments have been printed in the Avalanche and often discussed and there is hardly any need of going over them again. We have given the principles of the amendments considerable thought and study and honestly believe it will be best for the taxpayers and the families of Michigan to defeat them.

President Coolidge says that the great urge and wish of the American people is to be let alone. He runs his job on the level and well. He brings to it the common sense which Americans admire more than any other of the rare virtues. He is a doer rather than a talker. He is not a Napoleon and does not pretend to be one. He is Calvin Coolidge, straight, efficient, upright, courageous, honest to us, as well as with us, and his one desire is to give us a good run for our money. He has the people with him. He detests the taint of hokum politics; and our pockets picked so often. As Calvin Coolidge we want him for our president.—Los Angeles Times.

VOTE NO on all Amendments.

VETERINARIES TESTING CATTLE IN CRAWFORD COUNTY

Drs. Spade and Logan, state veterinarians, of Lansing, began last week the testing of cattle for tuberculosis in Crawford County. They began work first in the Village and a number of cattle from some of our local dairies have been found to be afflicted. The work will continue until every cow in the county has been tested. Those found to be afflicted are branded and soon will be shipped to Detroit stock yards, where they will be slaughtered and the carcasses disposed of in the best manner possible, depending upon the status of the disease. Many of our cattle owners are having to sustain real property losses, financially and otherwise, and have the sympathy of their friends. The federal and state governments pay a portion of the loss and also the owner receives such sums as may be derived from the carcasses. The object, of course, in sifting out the diseased cattle is to protect the consumers of the milk that comes from such cattle. Human beings, especially children, are susceptible to the disease thru the drinking of milk from tuberculin cattle. One cattle owner lost nine milk cows out of a herd of twelve. One man in Otsego lost his entire herd of 13 cows. These seem like very drastic measures but the federal and state governments feel that the health of the people is of more importance than the loss of dollars.

On the front page of the supplement of this edition appears a legal notice calling the attention of cattle owners to the law in regard to the testing of the cattle in this county.

SUNSHINE MISSION.

"The Redeeming Love Sunshine Mission" is still alive and Sunday school will be as usual at 10 a. m. on the 2nd of Nov. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Harder. Also prayer meeting on Friday night at 7 p. m. Remember these meetings are for you and your soul's salvation, and whatever you make of them you will have. And the invitation is for everyone. And everyone is welcome. Also would we like to say with the word of God: Ho, everyone that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye and buy wine and milk, yea come and buy without money, and without price. Wherefore do you spend money for that which is not bread? And your labour for that which satisfieth not? Hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness. Incline your ear, and come unto me; hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David. Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon Him while he is near.

America Without Liberty Would Not be America at All

THERE is one thing more important than great cities and rich farms. It is the American Spirit. It is the spirit that threw off the shackles of tyranny and gave birth to the Republic.

The Spirit of America is the Spirit of Liberty. America without Liberty would not be America at all.

The founders of this Republic recognized the importance of Liberty when they laid the foundations of our present greatness.

The Constitution of the United States guarantees Freedom of Speech, Press, Religion and—EDUCATION.

This Freedom is now being challenged by an effort to abolish all private and church schools.

The School Amendment is contrary to the Spirit of America.

It will not be approved by any man or woman who loves America and its ideals.

Washington:

"I have often expressed my sentiments that every man conducting himself as a good citizen and being accountable to God alone for his religious opinions ought to be protected in worshipping the Deity according to the dictates of his own conscience."

Jefferson:

"I have considered religion as a matter between every man and his Maker, in which no other, and far less the public, has a right to intermeddle."

Lincoln:

"If you have been inclined to believe that all men are not created equal in those inalienable rights enumerated by our charter of liberty let me entreat you to come back! Return to the fountain where waters spring close by the blood of the Revolution."

Roosevelt:

"The good citizen will demand liberty for himself, and as a matter of pride he will see to it that others receive the liberty which he thus claims as his own."

Make Each R.R. Crossing A Stop Street

Most Michigan cities compel motorists to bring their cars to a full stop before crossing any heavy-traffic street.

This law is universally approved. It saves time and averts accident. It is wise and fair.

Yet heavy motor vehicle traffic is far less dangerous to you than a railroad train. Speed is the very essence of Railroad service. A train cannot stop quickly. Nor can it turn out to avoid hitting you.

Six states have already passed laws, making stop streets out of Railroad intersections. The time may come when the State of Michigan will compel you by law to thus protect yourself.

But, why wait for law, when you have common sense?

Determine today that, from this time on, you will always bring your car to a full stop before crossing a Railroad track, anywhere—any time.

Everybody will approve your good judgment. Many will follow your example. And you will be relieved forever from the possibility of this, the most serious of common accidents.

DOUGHERTY RULES

WOULD TRANSFER TAX BURDEN

Right of Specific Assessment on Public Utilities Would Be Threatened

Lansing, Mich.—Attorney General Andrew B. Dougherty holds in an opinion made public last Monday, that the adoption of the proposed income tax amendment to the state constitution virtually would wipe out the Michigan primary school interest fund, which this year raised nearly $15,000,000 for local school purposes.

He states that the proposed abandonment of the constitutional requirement for a "uniform rule" of taxation in Michigan would throw the taxing of railroad companies, telephone companies, etc., which since Pingree's time have been in direct charge of the state board of assessors, back into the hurley-burley of local taxation, raising grave doubts as to whether or not the same degree of uniformity would obtain as now exists.

To a considerable extent, it is made clear, the income proposal would merely transfer the burden carried by these utilities to private individuals and citizens whose property is now paying general taxes. The income levy proposed is estimated at $12,000,000.

The attorney general's opinion was prepared at the request of Thomas E. Johnson, superintendent of public instruction, to clarify the situation developing from frequent assertions that the primary school fund would or would not be affected.

EXILED PLAYER SUES LANDIS

Dolan, Banished for Bribe Attempt,
Seeks Share of Series Money

New York—William J. Fallon, noted criminal lawyer, has been retained by Alva J. (Cozy) Dolan, former Giant coach, exiled from so-called organized baseball by the edict of Commissioner Landis, after he confessed offering Heinie Sand, Phillies' short-fielder, $500 to "throw" a game, if necessary, to insure the Giants' winning their fourth consecutive pennant, in the season just closed.

Dolan, named by O'Connell as having inspired the bribe offer which Sand rejected, has instructed Fallon to start suit immediately against Landis to force the latter to restore Dolan to good standing in baseball, to compel payment to the ex-coach of a losing team player's share from the receipts of the recent world series, and for damages for slander.

TEACHER MURDERED WITH AXE

Rejected Suitor Confesses Slaying of Former Sweetheart

Grand Haven, Mich.—Egbert "Happy" Dyke, 34 years old, Grand Rapids automobile mechanic, has confessed, according to officers, that he killed his former sweetheart, Molly Fleming, 23 years old, Conklin school teacher, who was found dying in a woodshed at the rear of her school last week.

Miss Fleming, whose head was cut open with an axe, died without regaining consciousness sufficient to permit her to give an inkling of the circumstances of the assault.

Discovery of the crime was made by a group of children who had returned to the school ground to play.

Norfolk, Va.—Five men were killed and 17 injured in an explosion in the forward twin gun-mount of the new scout cruiser Trenton during target practice on the southern drill grounds off Cape Henry.

The Trenton sent word ashore that the cause of the accident had not been determined.

Berlin—President Ebert has issued a decree dissolving the reichstag, thereby paving the way for a general election.

DANGER!
Vote No—or Pay

Tax radicals in Michigan have succeeded in placing on the ballot, for your vote, next Tuesday, a Constitutional Amendment LOADED WITH DYNAMITE.

This Amendment proposes a State Income Tax which would, in its eventual result, deprive every wage earner in Michigan of from 5% to 10% of his—or her—income.

This Tax would increase your rent and raise the price of every article you buy.

Like every other Tax, it would be passed along to the eventual consumer, and would be finally balanced by a corresponding increase in living costs.

It Imperils Prosperity

Worse even than this would be the foul blow this Amendment would strike at Michigan Industry. For the manufacturer here must still compete for business in open market. Few other states have income taxes. None has a tax so cruelly severe as the one proposed for us.

Can the Michigan factory successfully shoulder this handicap?

Must it not eventually go under, throwing its men out of work, and increasing the tax burden of everyone else?

It Threatens Our Schools

The higher authorities, including the State's Attorney General and its Superintendent of Public Instruction, agree that this proposed amendment would have still another disastrous and even more immediate effect. It would surely reduce taxes paid by railroads, telephone companies, power companies, and other public service corporations.

It would go back to the old system of local assessment and local rates—the system which Pingree changed through his Equal Taxation fight, after these corporations had, for many years, escaped paying their share of taxation.

By this backward step, the Michigan Primary School Fund, into which such corporations today pay yearly the huge sum of almost $15,000,000, would surely be seriously depleted. In great part, the grade schools of Michigan are supported through this fund.

Women Voters!

Your family needs your husband's earnings far more than the rich, mighty state of Michigan.

But the politicians want more of his money to spend and they will get it, if the Income Tax Amendment passes.

Vote NO on this amendment next Tuesday.

Keep this income where it belongs—where it can help support your family and make life easier for all of you.

Read this advertisement carefully and understand how you can make your vote—and your influence—count as they have never counted before.

It Robs Your Church

Heavy, too, would be the penalty enacted by this amendment from Michigan Churches, fraternal societies and Charities. They are not in any way exempted from this tax. Therefore, for every dollar you contribute to them, from five to ten cents would go to the politicians to spend, if this amendment passes.

And remember, this is a Constitutional Amendment!

It becomes, if passed, part of Michigan's FUNDAMENTAL LAW, and almost impossible to change in any way.

Defeat It!

Let nobody delude you regarding the actual facts. Place no trust whatever in the loose phrasing of the Amendment itself. And don't confuse it, for one moment, with any other amendment presented for your vote. You will find this amendment the second on your ballot.

Determine firmly, right now, to carefully pick it out on Tuesday, and to vote an emphatic NO as your verdict on this State Income Tax.

POWER OF INTEREST

If Adam had begun saving $10.00 a day 6000 years ago and had lived through these 6000 years and had saved $10.00 every day, but had received no interest, his fortune would be less than $25,000,000.

But if Adam had saved $1.00 on only one day and never saved another cent and put that $1.00 at interest at only 1 per cent for the 6000 years, the fortune would be greater than all the good money in the world. This certainly demonstrates the power of interest.

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY.

Religious liberty has been rightly called "America's Foremost contribution to civilization." Religious liberty, guaranteed by the state, means simply that all people may freely exercise the right to serve God according to the dictates of their own conscience. The acceptance of this principle by America has taken religion out of the sphere of things with which the State may interfere. Its frank acceptance has produced a condition here under which all, no matter what their religious convictions and exercises may be, may live in peace and harmony with one another. This has been accomplished by letting every man lead his inner life and attend to the soul's needs of himself and his family unhampered by others. Strange, is it not, that it took humanity thousands of years to reach this stage of forbearance and toleration.

But it is equally strange that we have today among us men and women who would ruthlessly invade or even destroy this precious boon to humanity.

These people are responsible for the election of the so-called hater of the submission to the voters of Michigan at the coming election of the so-called School Amendment which, on the face of it, appears to be merely a measure designed for the promotion of the public schools, but is in reality meant to wipe out all private and church schools in this state.

Now, church schools are being maintained by people who believe that religion should premeate all education. There are many people, of course, who do not believe that religion is an essential factor in education. As citizens of a country in which religious liberty is guaranteed they have a right to believe this, and nobody should think of interfering with that right. But so have the people who think religion in education is necessary, a right to believe as they do, and consequently also to maintain church schools by means of which they put their convictions into practice.

It is our frank opinion that these people have a good American right under our guarantees of religious liberty to maintain their church schools and that no man has a right to interfere with them, especially since these schools are being maintained and paid for by the people who want them and are, besides, meeting every reasonable educational requirement of the state.

We sincerely hope that every good American will vote "No" on the School Amendment.

NEW TYPE OF CARS
STIRS AUTO WORLD

Studebaker Duplex Ends Need of Hunting for Side Curtains in the Dark and Storm.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 29.—A new type of car has stirred the automobile world as has nothing since the abandonment of the "buggy" style of body building.

It is the Studebaker Duplex, so called to indicate that it is an open car one moment and, 30 seconds later, it is an enclosed car.

Like all great advances in the industrial arts, it is "so simple in operation, it is a wonder it wasn't thought of before," particularly since its need has been growing year by year, ever since automobiles were made.

Many people, all of the time, and most people, part of the time, want an open car—to bring to their riding the fresh crispness of the country air, and a free and untrammelled association with the great outdoors.

Yet for these same people, the snug comfort of the closed car, shutting out the storm and the wind and cold, has been at times a necessity.

Two Cars in One.
The Studebaker Duplex is both cars in one. Just pull down the roller enclosures concealed in the roof of the car. In 30 seconds the open car has been made an enclosed car.

No hurried efforts to put up curtains, no hunting for the right one while the storm beats in, no mixing, once on, in the rain, no exposure to cold, no loss of time while trying to catch the emergency, the protection given by a closed car, just pull down the roller enclosures, and instantaneously enclosed car effect.

The body is built substantially, strong, corners and roof frame are of steel. The roof has curved steel sides and back, hard front, steel, V-shaped cross beams, six of them, support the water-proofed, duplex fabric top, and its hinges, frame is permanent beauty—no sagging tops.

OUT GETTING UP NIGHTS.
A Healthy Bladder Acts During the Day.

C. N. Shuman, Republic, Ohio, says "Before taking Librax (Kodol) (Formula) had to get up six or seven times each night. Now I do not get up at all. You may use any medicine if it would benefit anyone with bladder trouble." He could not take drugs that check the action of the bladder. You may have a condition of the bladder. Librax (Kodol) (Formula) increases the action of the bladder. It cures the bladder and causes the body to be as healthy as a foreign country, and it is the only medicine that cures the bladder. These tablets are sold at all drug stores or at the Laboratory, Mechanical, Ohio. A. M. Lewis, Druggist.

On one page of this issue of the Avalanche appears a reproduction of the election ballot that will be used in the election next week Tuesday.

Some voters, especially beginners, may wonder at the absence of the names of the presidential candidates. In their places appear the names of the fifteen electoral candidates, the number to which Michigan is entitled, for whom the people may vote. These in turn vote for the presidential candidates. Those beneath the Republican ticket, designated by the picture of Lincoln, will cast their votes for Coolidge and Dawes; under the Democratic heading will vote for Davis and Bryan; those beneath the Independent ticket, with the bell, will vote for LaFollette and Wheeler, etc. The three amendments will appear upon a separate ballot.

The election will soon be over and we believe that everyone will be glad of it, especially the candidates. It has been a trying campaign for the people of the nation who have in any way taken an interest in it. Crawford county may be expected to give Coolidge a good majority. Also Couzens and Groesbeck appear to be strong here. Everything seems to be solid Republican in the country and state until we get down to the county candidates, and right there we refuse to guess. There are contests between Peter F. Jorgenson, democrat, and Jess Bohemeyer, republican, for sheriff; Frank Sales, democrat and Clarence Johnson, republican, for county clerk, and Edwin S. Chalker, republican, and Walmer Jorgenson, democrat for treasurer. On another page appears a facsimile of the ballot as it will be submitted to the Crawford county voters. Don't neglect to vote.

WAY TO IDENTIFY ANY STOLEN CAR

Simple Matter to Place Secret Marks on Machine in Out-of-Way Places.

By ERWIN GREER, President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.

You wouldn't leave a bag of $20 gold pieces parked at the curb even though they were stamped "In God We Trust." In fact the person who did so would immediately be sent to the insane asylum. But nine out of every ten automobile owners, according to statistics, are fully as careless with their machines, which often represent a bag of gold pieces far too heavy to carry.

You think nothing of leaving your car for long periods without locking it. And if you are fortunate enough in still having it, why it is nothing less than sheer luck. It is little wonder that automobile thieves live off the fat of the land and find such a profitable field for their work.

How Thieves Work.

Thieves usually work in pairs and when they see an unlocked car at the curb, they drive another machine alongside of the unlocked one. It is an easy matter to step from one into the other. If the car is discovered in the actual theft, the other car is the means of getting away. As a rule they take the one that offers the least resistance for an easy getaway.

Suppose your car is one of those stolen. Could you identify it with a new paint job or other disguising features? Remember that the car is the thief's property until proved otherwise. Without some real proof you cannot, of course, claim your property. With the engine numbers and frame identification removed, you cannot possibly tell your car from another, especially on account of the fact that there are so many standard models.

Identification Marks.

It is a simple matter to put secret identification marks on your machine. Inside the hubcaps and on the frame are excellent places. Or you might loosen some part of the upholstery and insert your business card. In this event you would catch the thief red-handed. Suppose that those identification places were discovered and removed—surely there are other ways that will suggest themselves to you from an observation of your own particular car. And a thief isn't superhuman; he cannot locate all the identification places.

But do it right now. Don't wait until the car is gone.

It only takes a few seconds to lock your car. And, as a rule, the thief shadows his prospect several days before he steals it. If he sees that you are careful it is a ten to one shot that he'll pass your machine up for one that is easier to steal.

So don't put temptation in his way.

Well Recommended Paint for Use on the Muffler

It is difficult to find a satisfactory paint for exhaust pipe and muffler, because of the heat of those parts. Here is a highly recommended muffler paint: Boiled linseed oil, one-fifth pound; Japan varnish, one-fifth pound; turpentine, two-fifths pound; lampblack, one and a half ounces; powdered graphite, one and a half ounces; powdered oxide of manganese, three-eighths ounce. Mix the linseed oil and Japan varnish well together, then add in order, stirring all the time, the lampblack, the graphite and the powdered manganese. Add the turpentine, until the quantity mentioned has been used. This mixture should be used as soon as it is mixed, as it dries quickly. Every time the brush is dipped in it should be stirred. It is well to paint the muffler while it is hot, after having cleaned it thoroughly.

THE FIRST CAR FROM WINNIPEG TO VICTORIA

The first car to travel from Winnipeg to Victoria by the All-Canadian route entering one of the 12 tunnels passed on route. The trip was made by Austin F. Remont, secretary of the Lincoln Highway association and E. S. Evans both of Detroit. They were awarded a gold medal by the Canadian Highway association.

AUTOMOBILE FACTS

Carry a piece of tough canvas in your tool box. In an emergency it makes an excellent patch when doubled twice and caught and held by the rim.

Nearly 7,000 new motor buses were put into service during 1923 on lines in the United States. These figures

Keeping Car Under Control on Grades

In driving down steep grades various resistances may be utilized to keep the car under control. If the engine is kept running and the gears are in high, there is only slight resistance. This may be increased by shifting into second speed, and further increased by shifting into first. When still further resistance is needed to maintain a check on the progress of the car and it is not desired to use the brakes the ignition may be shut off and the throttle closed. By opening the throttle the resistance is still further increased. The maximum of resistance and the best control on a dangerous steep hill may be obtained by shifting into first, switching off the ignition and applying the brakes at intervals.

Grabbing Rattles in Their Infancy Is Right Plan

The more expensive a car is the longer you expect it to run without rattles. Yet it is possible with even the lowest priced cars to keep the rattles out if you but catch them as they appear. They will come one by one and if they are caught in the same manner they will not be nearly so hard to remove as they would be if they are allowed to accumulate in a troublesome chorus before they are stopped.

Rattles in the brake linkage and other parts under the car can be found by shutting off the engine and allowing the car to coast in neutral gear. If someone stands or sits on the running board while the driver does this, many sounds that have been difficult to locate will be readily found. These link rods are a typical example of noise that will often defy the efforts of the driver to find, while another person sitting on the running board or outside the car will have little or no difficulty in locating them.

Place for Extinguisher on the Running Board

Where to put the extinguisher is an open question. Under the dash is the customary place. But almost every motor car fire endangers this spot. Flames sometimes envelop the extinguisher before the driver has a chance to unhook it. The most logical place, from the fire standpoint, is to place it on the running board, but this not only spoils the car's looks, but tempts children to meddle with it. For roadsters, especially, the extinguisher can be carried on brackets at the base of the driver's seat. In this position it is very handy. For touring cars a good place is the back of the front seat. Here it is accessible, that is the main thing. It would be less conspicuous if painted black. And in winter it would be covered by the robes. In this respect, however, use your own judgment.—Motor Life.

Poor Cement Is Blamed for Failure of Patches

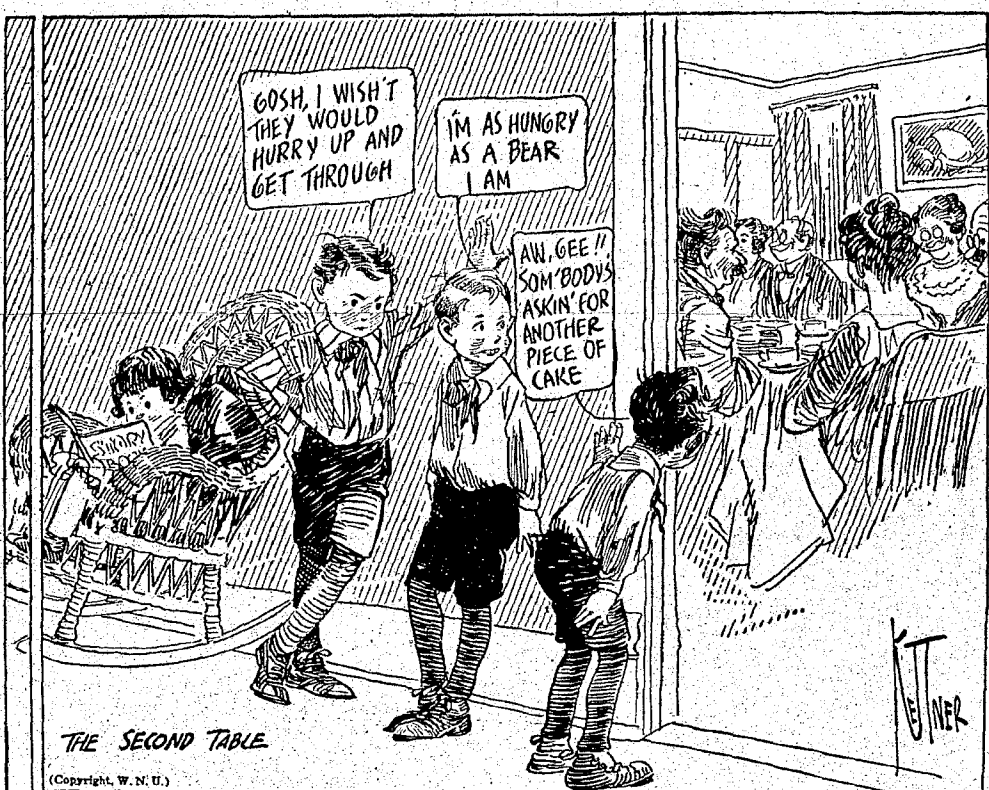

One reason, perhaps, why a great many roadside and amateur tire patches do not hold when the tube is assembled into the shoe is that rubber cement is used which is not up to the mark.

Usually the cement has been repositing in the car's tire repair kit for quite a time, and it is therefore not so fresh and active as it once was. Be sure to get the best materials you can. In the first place, and, further, before going on a long trip examine the tire repair kit to make sure everything in it is in good condition.

Better an inspection before the start of the trip than regrets at the poor shape everything is in later when called upon to fix a puncture out on the road.

MAKING GOOD IN A SMALL TOWN

Real Stories About Real Girls

By MRS. HARLAND H. ALLEN

(© 1924, Western Newspaper Union)

THE GOLDFISH GIRL

MOST popular and profitable of all aquarium fish is a little one of alluring name and attractive coloring—the goldfish.

Here's why. The goldfish is easy to keep and not difficult to breed; and, while the rarer kinds are expensive, the common varieties, with which the novice must content herself, can be had for ridiculously small sums. A girl goldfish keeper, who has been graduated after several years to the stage where she is satisfied only with rare and fancy fish, is my informant.

"There are goldfish and goldfish," she declared, "and there are progressive stages in keeping them. After a time, one is satisfied only with the expensive kinds, which are most interesting and my best."

The goldfish-girl-to-be must first of all provide for the fish a tank that is as wide at the top as it is at the bottom—because the fish must have plenty of air. She must remember that goldfish heaven is filled with fish whose keepers thought they needed fresh water every day. For, in what is known as a properly "balanced" aquarium, fresh water must be added only occasionally. The keeper secures this desirable "balance" by having in her aquarium living plants of the kind that will furnish the oxygen the fish require, and will absorb the carbonic acid gas the fish give off.

After the tank has been arranged for several days, and the water is warm and the plants rooted, the keeper may introduce the fish with a little net, one at a time. If at any time she sees a fish swimming near the surface and making a peculiar clucking sound, there is not enough oxygen—the tank is over-crowded.

The aquarium should have an east window, if possible, since goldfish thrive in morning light. "A little sunlight is beneficial, too, but too much is injurious."

The dealer who sells the original stock to the keeper may agree to buy back all her surplus. Or she may be able to sell to a pet-stock store in a nearby city. If not, she may rent a window in the busiest store of her own town, and display her pets in it. She should "talk up" her hobby among her friends, and should carry an advertisement in the local papers.

When the goldfish girl can raise and sell large quantities of common goldfish successfully—then and then only it will be time for her to indulge in the fancier (and incidentally much more "finicky") types of fish.

HELPING MEN "SPRUCE UP"

EVERY "old bachelor" is a potential customer of the sewer-on-of-buttons and mender-of-clothes.

And many a married man is in the market for a little "perk up" at times, too. That's the discovery of one little girl, who, specializing in the tie-pressing business, consequently knows something about the markets of related businesses.

"All bachelordom is my special field of endeavor," she declares. "Though the married man drops in for an occasional tie-pressing, too, when his wife is away or when he has a hurry-up business appointment."

This girl sponges and presses the most elongated, seedy-looking string into a semblance of something fit to be called a tie. Her equipment is inexpensive: only an electric iron, a table and pad, a tie rack, a water jar, a sponge and some pasteboard. The business is considered a drawing card to the shop in which she is located, so she pays no rent.

The tie-pressing specialty is a good one on any "Main Street." But there are plenty of other possibilities in the art of the clothes caterer to men. How about a glove mending business, conducted on the same plan as the little tie-mender's trade? Here is a simple, practical business, well-paying, requiring no capital, needed in every community, and practically an open field. Men and women, even women who do most of their other mending themselves, are glad to turn over their gloves to be mended by one who makes it her business to do it especially well.

A "Collar and Cuff Laundry" is a bit more of an undertaking, but it's a good one for a girl if she has just a little money to invest. Men are particular about having their collars "done" perfectly.

Less intricate, even, than any of the other suggested plans, is that of button-lady, whose job is simply to replace missing buttons and tighten dangling ones. Or, the small-town girl might make a specialty of general mending for men. If she does this, she should be able to supply both patches and buttons, and if she is an expert, she might darn small tears in woolen suits and overcoats.

The girl who starts any one of these businesses will not have much difficulty getting customers if she locates in a ranch-frequented part of town.

The well-to-do old bachelor will be her steady customer. The richer he becomes and the more there are of him, the more lucrative her business will be—and he's becoming better off and more plentiful all the time.

Michael Faraday

Michael Faraday was one of the greatest men of science that England has produced. In 1813 he became assistant to Sir Humphry Davy at the Royal Institution and remained at work there, experimenting and lecturing, for over fifty years. He had a very wonderful mind and a singularly attractive character. His researches on gases and their condensation, on electricity, magnetism and electro-magnetism are of the first importance, a non-union to genius of the highest order.

Recognizes Good and Bad Church Weather

A minister using weather forecasts to fit the attendance to the capacity of his church and the services to the mood of the congregation as affected by the weather, is the latest innovation in utilizing the government's prognostications that has come to the attention of weather bureau officials in Washington.

The pastor of a large church in one of the country's large cities, whose edifice is unable to hold all that come in "good church weather," but which is not filled in inclement weather or fine outdoor weather, telephones the forecaster at the local weather bureau office every week for Sunday's weather prospects.

If the forecast indicates weather good enough for church, but not for golf, or motorboating, publicity through the newspapers is curtailed and no attempt is made to increase the attendance, as the church will be crowded to capacity without such efforts. But if stormy or very fine weather is in prospect special announcements of sermon and attractive musical programs are made in the newspapers.

SALVATION ARMY ORGANIZER HERE.

C. Roy Watson of Detroit, organizer for the Salvation Army is here this week conferring with the Crawford county advisory board as well as the branch boards of the county. Few people need be told of the wonderful work done by the Salvation Army during the war, nor need be reminded of their contributions before the war that assisted in building up this staunch organization nor of the need for sustained assistance to again have them ready and prepared for future emergencies. The state institutions of the Salvation Army in Michigan are handling a large proportion of cases sent direct from county or organizations. The rescue and maternity hospitals tactfully and humanely conduct the un-wed mother and child through their trying ordeal and fortify them completely for a useful and honorable future in the world. The fresh air camps for broken down mothers and children takes them out of their submerged environments and builds up their strength and elevates their spirits by contrast and inspiration. Yet many of the counties are only contributing by quota a fraction of the support that they should be sustaining.

Co. and friends, and study this wonderfully efficient and inspired organization at work in its 46 Michigan institutions—delving by 16 major lines of activity into the depths of human misery and misfortune. You will find some former friends, relatives or neighbors in its care. And we promise that you cannot help but become a two fisted friend of the Salvation Army.

Mr. Watson in his recruiting experience among all classes and walks of men finds that those who most substantially and efficiently help their fellow men are those who invariably meet the greatest rewards in life. That the half-hearted, wobbler, lethargic quering type reap their natural estate. And that big men and women, while always very busy, open their hearts and hands to the work unreservedly. All who are not reached by the workers are asked to address their contributions and offers to assist in the work, to the Editor.

On Henry Ford's timber holdings no tree under 12 inches in diameter is cut; accumulated brush is burned to prevent forest fires; scraps, chips and shavings at his sawmill are fed into distillation plants and 34 valuable by-products are recovered from the 350 tons of scraps daily.

HEALTH NOTES

The clinics this month for the pre-school children are important. The dates are Nov. 5-6-7-10 and 11. We are getting closer toward health when we begin at the beginning to prevent illness by correcting or preventing defects. Little defects in small children become serious in older children or adults, many times.

The best way to have school children in perfect health is to correct the defects before they go to school. Mal-nutrition may be due to defects and those defects may not be discovered except by a general physical examination. Mal-nutrition and underweight are not the same thing but usually go together.

Signs of Mal-nutrition. Lines under the eyes, flabby muscles, pale or sallow skin, stooping posture, nervous, irritable, cries easily, inattentive, easily worried, mouth breather.

Mal-nutrition is not a disease but a condition that invites disease. Its causes are the same as those given last week for underweight.

There is a woman doctor, a nutritionist and a nurse with the clinics. All reports are sent to the family doctor.

Tuberculosis.

In recent years it has been shown that the germ frequently gets into the body in childhood, but since it does not grow easily in the human body, many of these germs are killed at once by the tissues. Others lie inactive for a long time in the glands in the chest and do not develop until by some chance the resisting power of the body is lowered sufficiently for the germ to begin to grow; the thoroughly healthy body not being a favorable growing place. Overwork, dissipation, dark, dirty homes or work places, bad or scanty food, late hours, drunkenness, and certain sicknesses, such as grippe, measles, whooping cough, pneumonia and typhoid fever, and also frequent and closely repeated pregnancies, weaken the body, give the germ the opportunity it needs, and enable it to develop. In bodies thus weakened the germ can flourish, and, if they are not strengthened in time by proper living, the disease will advance.

VOTE "NO"

ON THE INCOME TAX AMENDMENT

An Open Letter to the Editor of
The MICHIGAN PATRON

In the October issue of the MICHIGAN PATRON there was published a full page advertisement on this subject over my name and the names of several well known and highly honorable citizens of western Michigan. For this you have rendered a bill higher in amount than that of any other paper. Your next issue comes rather too late to be a satisfactory medium for reply; besides—

The subject is a public question of a highly important nature. The opinions of those who signed this article were entitled to respectful treatment. The proposal, if a mistake, will be a most serious mistake. If adopted, it is bound to have indirect as well as direct effects upon the state and its "citizens and inhabitants" which you may some time find means all Michigan corporations, without exception. The discussion was temperate and worthy of consideration. Some of your readers may disagree with the arguments, but as a result of them may hesitate at least before casting a vote for the proposed amendment.

In spite of the fact that you accepted this advertisement, that you published it and mailed it to your readers, you nevertheless saw fit to publish on the opposite page a long article, for the obvious purpose of destroying the effect of the advertisement which you were willing to publish for hire. The principal feature of your article was its manifest appeal to class prejudice, the resort of the politician having a weak cause. Your lawlright is not questioned, but you committed a most unethical act, without precedent, I believe, among newspapers.

But your readers are intelligent. They will read both pages and weigh the opposing statements with due thought. They will consider which side has dealt with the matter more fairly, more far-sightedly, more temperately; and they will lay aside all that smacks of sophistry.

Perhaps some of your readers value your legal opinions. I do not; nor do I admit the truth of your statements. Naturally your copy was prepared in great haste. It does not betray wearying depth of thought.

You say in bold display type, "The Michigan Trust Company, Grand Rapids, financing fight to defeat income tax amendment." This statement is utterly false.

I know of no reason why that company is not at liberty—indefinitely it has a duty—to take part in such an important matter as this. It has legal and moral responsibilities as guardian and trustee for the properties and incomes, large and small, of very many widows, children and others who know it and depend upon it and who would be affected seriously by the adoption of the proposed amendment. It has not, however, spent one cent in connection with the advertisements referred to, or otherwise in the subject matter, nor has it agreed to do so. A number of my personal friends, at my suggestion, have made contributions meeting a portion of the expenses incurred, and I will personally assume the balance of the expense, if necessary, as a contribution to public service.

Your article aims to champion the cause of the farmer and the "workingman," and at the same time it arrays what you call a "banking institution" against these classes. It seems you cannot conceive that any individual connected with such an institution would feel impelled by public spirited motives to act in the interest of his native state. Under our form of government men reach places of importance in all branches of our business life, as I have, from the very lowest beginning. They may be connected with a "banking institution," as you term the Michigan Trust Company, and still not lose their honesty, sense of duty or wholesome interest in public affairs. As your readers know, local bankers are as public spirited, generally speaking, as other men in the community and are honestly and deeply concerned in any tax law which in their opinion threatens the prosperity of the state. Most local bankers known to your readers, I warrant, are honorable and dependable. It is the same in the cities. Very often the banker knows more about financial and economic questions than those who are not in as close touch with them. The editor who attempts to gain adherence to his opinions by setting class against class, saying in effect that a banker or an officer of a trust company is unworthy of confidence because necessarily opposed to the interests of farmers, is himself unworthy of his editorial position and automatically puts himself in a class with those politicians who, for individual gain, seek to create a feeling of unrest and discontent among the people. You ought to know that a bank or a trust company serves all classes, including a large number of farmers, and lives only as long as it retains the confidence of those who know it best.

I give your readers credit for intelligence, for the ability to discern the right from the wrong. You do not.

I repeat that the proposed amendment is an example of complete distrust in our form of representative government without precedent and without parallel in any state in the Union. I repeat that it concerns all citizens, whether they sweep up a factory or own the factory, whether they work in the shop, the office or the field.

I assert that it would increase rents and the cost of everything sold. It would continue present taxes on real estate, and all kinds of securities; it imposes practically no limit thereon; and in addition would add a tax on the income of these holdings. It would cripple Michigan industries (1) by adding to all present taxes, state and federal, already burdensome, a new one upon all net income of industries, and, if incorporated, plus a new tax upon all dividends of stockholders residing in this state (2) by compelling such industries to compete with other industries in and out of the state owned by nonresidents not subject to this proposed tax. These factors are certain to increase prices.

It would drive people out of Michigan, because no taxpayer, personal or corporate, needs to submit to it. Removal from the state is all that is needed to escape this proposed tax. It is an undiluted example of double taxation, without parallel in any state in the Union—not even Wisconsin under La Follette and his followers. They had the sense to see that people will not endure double taxation.

It would encourage extravagance in state expenditure instead of economy.

It treats resident stockholders of Michigan corporations unfairly and new industries will settle elsewhere.

It would cause much litigation.

It is an appeal to selfishness and cupidity and will not work out in practice as its advocates would have the farmers and the "workingmen" believe.

PERSONALLY, I FAVOR AND HAVE LONG FAVORED A STATE INCOME TAX. I am so on record. But I am not in favor of one based on such clumsy constitutional drafting, one so unfair, so unjust, so unwise and destructive as is this proposed amendment. When the time comes I shall offer my assistance, in good faith, in preparing the right kind of legislative measure for an income tax. There is a far simpler way, a much fairer way, a more economical way—a way that will affect the state favorably. This proposed amendment will close that way and should be voted down.

Before you do more on this subject I advise you to ascertain the effect this amendment would have upon the PRIMARY SCHOOL FUND. It will interest your readers.

New Type of Car Stirs Automobile World

It is an open car one moment and 30 seconds later same car is entirely enclosed. Studebaker Duplex ends need of hunting for side curtains in the dark and storm

A new type of car has stirred the automobile world as has nothing since the abandonment of the "buggy" style of body building.

It is the Studebaker Duplex, so called to indicate that it is an open car one moment, and 30 seconds later it is an enclosed car.

Like all great advances in the industrial arts, it is "so simple in operation, it is a wonder it wasn't thought of before" — — —

Particularly since its need has been growing, year by year, ever since automobiles were made.

Many people all of the time, and most people part of the time, want an open car—to bring to their riding the fresh crispness of the country air, and a free and untrammelled association with the great outdoors.

Yet for these same people, the snug comfort of the closed car, shutting out the storm and the wind and the cold, has been at times a necessity.

Two cars in one

The Studebaker Duplex is both cars in one. Just pull down the roller enclosures concealed in the roof of the car. In 30 seconds the open car has been made an enclosed car.

No hurried efforts to put up curtains; no hunting for the right one while the storm beats in; no mixing them up in the dark; no exposure through holes torn in them while trying to obtain, for the emergency, the protection given by a closed car — — —

Just pull down the roller enclosures giving instant enclosed car effect.

The body is built substantially—sides, corners and roof frame are of steel. The roof has curved steel sides and back; hardwood front. Steel, U-shaped cross beams, six of them, support the waterproofed, duplex fabric top and its linings. Here is permanent beauty, no sagging tops.

But Studebaker, on which the whole vehicle-using world has come to depend for reliability, would not rest on only one real contribution to the value given the public.

It must give all that engineering ability could devise.

Striking new features

So there are offered three distinct models of cars, to meet each of the three fields of demand—the Standard Six, with 113-inch wheelbase and 50 horsepower motor; the Special Six, with 120-inch wheelbase and 65 horsepower motor; the Big Six, most magnificent and luxurious of its products, with 127-inch wheelbase and 75 horsepower motor.

Duplex bodies are available on each line. In addition, closed models have workmanship and materials and beauty of line so far above the price class of the car, they must be seen to be appreciated.

Of scarcely less importance than the Duplex feature are other improvements such as, automatic ignition system, lighting control on the steering wheel, new location of emergency brake, improved one-piece windshield and many others.

The body lines, steering mechanism, and even the fenders of the new Studebaker were designed especially for genuine balloon tires. Thus the body lines harmonize with grace and beauty hitherto unattained, even by Studebaker.

Come in and see these new cars.
